

Intern Product Development (m/f/d)

To support our business growth in Hamburg, we now invite applications to the position of Intern Product Development (m/f). The ideal candidate will be a key member of our growing team, managing new and existing client relationships.

Intern Product Development (m/f/d)

This is where we need your support:

- A new psychometric test or feature will be introduced to the market – you help us with the conception, implementation and launch of new or reworked tests and system features
- Existing and new products are put on the test bench – you make sure that they still meet our high-quality expectations and are well documented
- We have developed a new online assessment, or our system had an update – you test and check if everything still works perfectly for all users of the system, be it companies, candidates or internal system admins
- Something new happens out in the market – you are in the right spot to gather all relevant information about latest changes, trends and evolving topics to present them back to an internal board within the company

You are right if:

- You are studying with a main emphasis on psychology, human resources or economics
- You have strong web and IT skills including MS Office
- You catch up on things quickly, work with attention to detail and on your own initiative
- You adapt quickly to changes and are open-minded
- You ideally have a basic knowledge of selection and assessment as well as first experiences with managing projects
- You would like to stay with us for a paid internship lasting at least 8 weeks

We are working internationally, both regarding our clients and our colleagues. Therefore, fluent English skills both verbal and written are required for this position.

Intern Product Development (m/f)

What you can expect:

- You will get a glimpse behind the curtain of how innovative psychometric tests and systems are developed in close cooperation with IT
- You can practically apply what you have learned about personnel assessment and selection
- Flat hierarchy and communication on equal terms in an attractive and internationally operating organization
- Working with a competent and awesome team
- Flexible working times, fresh fruits and free coffee/tea
- Central location in the center of Hamburg
